At client's request, a price to unwind the investment will be quoted on the secondary market. However the client should take note that trading on the secondary market may result in losses and should bear in mind that such a market may be limited or non-existent.

The client should also take note of the risk of a potential illiquid or highly volatile secondary market which may lead to a widening in the differences between bid and offer prices.

Client may also need to pay unwinding costs and charges in the event of any early termination of the investment.
